Local Economy is a peer-reviewed journal that brings together policy analysts, researchers and practitioners concerned with local economic policies and social justice. Since its launch in 1986 it has grown into the premier UK-based journal for those who want to critically engage with problems of local economic development and regeneration. Local Economy maintains a commitment to grassroots activism, social justice and economic empowerment considered within the context of wider social, political and economic change.

Local Economy is international in scope, covers a broad range of issues and accommodates a diversity of perspectives. The editors welcome contributions for the four main sections of the Journal:

1. Viewpoints: punchy, polemic, readable commentaries on up-to-date issues (2000 – 3000 words)

2. Features: peer-reviewed articles on any aspect of local economic policy (up to 6000 words). Local Economy gives preference to articles which, while grounded in practice, offer more general insights and contributions to theory. Articles that engage with debates about current policy issues and which provide timely, up-to-date critique and/or suggestions to enhance policy effectiveness are especially welcomed.

3. In Perspective: an edited (but not peer reviewed) collection of shorter pieces which collectively cover a theme in local economic development. In Perspective articles give practitioners an opportunity to reflect on current or recent practice.

4. Reviews and Review Essays: keeping up to date with recent publications and reports.

Local Economy also welcomes suggestions for special issues.
